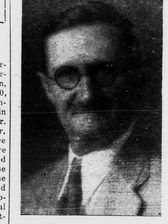
MR. C. S. McDEARMON DIED THIS MORNING



As we go to press we are saddened by news of the passing, at approximately 9:15 this morning of Mr. Clarence S. McDearmon, prominent local churchman and civic leader. Mr. McDearmon has been in declining health for some weeks, and was taken to Virginia Baptist Hospital earlier this week.

A retired depot agent for the Norfolk and Western Railway, he had served with the railroad for some sixty years prior to his retirement a few years ago.

Mr. McDearmon served as member of the Town Council and as Mayor of Appomattox for many years. He was a director at Farmers National Bank, a member of Monroe Lodge A. F. & F. M., and a leader in Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church.

He is srvived by a brother, J. D. McDearmon, of Appomattox; three daughters, Mrs. Frances Cheatham, Miss Mildred McDearmon and Mrs. Sam Witt, Jr.; and three sons, C. Lewis McDearmon, J. Wilbur McDearmon and Richard McDearmon.

He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Norman E. Farrar and Mrs. S. M. Thornton.

As we go to press funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SPREADING ALFALFAS

Alfalfa growers may one day be able to plant high - producing strains of alfalfa, that will spread, producing several new plants from each "mother" plant.

Researchers at VPI Agricultural Experiment Station, along with those in several other states, are testing several varieties of "creeping" alfalfa, which they hope may help replenish stands which are thinned by adverse climatic, soil, and disease factors.

These spreading alfalfas are being evaulated for their reaction to diseases, productivity survival when grown with grass, quality, hardiness and adaptability — as well as effectiveness in spreading and persistence under grazing.

None of the present types of spreading alfalfa are productive enough for wide adoption, so the scientists are crossing them with some of the outstanding hay alfalfas. The main objective is to add spreading ability to the best of the hay types that have good resistance to diseases and insects.

DEATHS

Rayon is not only the oldest, but the most versatile of the man-made fibers. It has been in commercial production for 45 years and is constantly undergoing improvements. Rayon can be, and is made to resemble wool, cotton, linen, silk, and is adaptable to almost any type of fabric. Filament rayon is used for lingerie, dresses, blouses, suits, curtains, draperies, upholstery and lampshades. Rayon is the only man-made fiber that can take the high twist necessary to a crepe. Staple rayon is the name of short lengths which can be spun into ply yarns. Staple is used for suitings, upholstery, carpets, blankets, and in blends with other fibers. Crimped rayon fibers provide the resilience needed for a quality carpet.

Rayon is very absorptive of all fibers which makes it dye well and very cool in summer. Many rayon dresses, blouses, suits, shirts, curtain and drapery fabrics have been processed to be completely washable; others should be dry cleaned. It is wise to look for an instruction label and to save such labels for reference. Rayon carpets and rugs should be washed: large rugs and wall-to-wall carpet by professionals, but scatter rugs may be washed in a home machine and the tumble drying action will make them soft and fluffy.

Pickling is a popular way to preserve the little Seckel pear, grown in home orchards or as a single tree on the home grounds. When firm-ripe, Seckels make an excellent sweet spicy relish.

Here is a recipe for Seckel pears developed by the Department of Agriculture. Ingredients: 8 pounds pears, 10 two-inch pieces stick cinnamon, 2 tablespoons of whole cloves, 2 tablespoons whole allspice, 4 pounds sugar, 1 quart vinegar, 1 pint water.

Wash the pears. Remove the blossom ends only. To make tender, boil the pears for 10 minutes in water to cover. Drain. Prick the skins. Put spices loosely in a clean, thin, white cloth; tie top tightly. Boil together for 5 minutes the sugar, vinegar, and 1 pint water. Add the pears and boil for 10 minutes or until pears are tender. Let stand overnight.

In the morning remove pears. Drain syrup from them and bring syrup to boiling. Pack pears in clean, hot, sterilized jars to top. Seal tightly. Yields about 10 pints.

Rice and Cheese: Plans for Special Plentiful Food Rice for this fall — on rice, and cheese — have been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

A program on rice was announced from September 27 through October 6, in cooperation with the country's Fall Rice Promotion. Rice scheduled for the time the 1956 crop will be coming in. Rice is grown in this country, following the all-out wartime efforts to meet world demands, have reached record crops to 46.3 million hundredweight this year — about 10 per cent smaller than last year's crop. But the carry-over of supplies is very heavy. Family food shoppers can find abundant supplies of rice on the markets at this time.

A program on cheese has been conducted throughout the month of October in cooperation with the dairy industry's October Dairy Festival. Milk production per cow is at a high level. For the first 8 months of the year, output set a record of 67.4 billion pounds, 2 per cent over the previous year record, set in 1954. Dairy products, of course, are a big part of our fluid milk — offer opportunity to make more use of this product.

TOLBERT - GRISHAW

Mr. and Mrs. Russell C. Grishaw, of Spout Spring announce the marriage of their daughter, Mazie Katherine, to Earl Thomas Tolbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Tolbert, of Andersonville. The double - ring ceremony was performed Oct. 12, at 8 o'clock at the home of the Rev. L. Preston Brown, of Appomattox, who officiated in the persence of members of the immediate family.

The bride wore a suit of grey tweed with black accessories. A corsage of white carnations completed her costume. Mrs. Herbert Carter, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and was attired in a tan suit with harmonizing accessories, and red roses. Herbert Carter was the groom's best man.

After a reception, the couple left on a short trip. The bride attended Appomattox High School, and the groom Buckingham School. They will make their home in Appomattox.

The 1956 Nobel prize for medicine was won by two Columbia University professors and a West German neurologist, in recognition of their work in exploring the interior of the living human heart.

President Nasser recently said that Egypt was ready for "any form of consultation or cooperation" to settle the Suez dispute, but barred any "domination," including international control of the canal.

IN FASHION NOW

One young designer has created a line of wool dresses along classic lines, in dark and light basic colors, that can be changed in appearance completely by changing the collar cuffs, belt or jeweled studs to tailored studs.

Each dress comes with a pair of changeabout accessories. The girl with imagination and a way with a needle can make even more changes possible. These dresses sell for around fifty dollars and are worth every penny.

This change-about business has become very popular. It all began with the basic black dress and year craze for costume jewelry. This was a good many years back and yet the working girl in large cities is still taking advantage of this trick to look glamorous for an important date even when there has been no time to go home to change. The change can be brought about by changing costume jewelry.

All shades of scarlet are important in the fashion picture this fall and winter. The red velvet shoe will be worn with all kinds of cocktail clothes. Along with the return of the velvet shoes comes a demand for crystal jewelry of all kinds. The envelope bag for evening is a must.

The velvet evening suit will be popular for all ages. Many are trimmed with satin, heavy, imported lace or fur. It is never wise to ecomonize when you are buying a garment made of velvet. If you can't afford a good suit, made of the best quality fabric, you will be wise to settle for something else.

If you have a really good figure, get sleek jersey sheath cut high in front and low in back. This is something new and very effective on a young girl.
